DEMOCRATIC HOSTILITY TO MAYOR FOX-THE HOUSE OF CORREC-TION - THE STREET-CLEANING

CONTRACTS. ONE of the most interesting features of the prominence given to the feeling of hostility entertained towards the Mayor by some of the Democratic Councilmen, who are evidently determined to assist in overruling his vetoes on all subjects which are not of a strictly partisan character. Yesterday, when he returned to the Select Council without his signature the bill vesting the authority to execute leases of property held in trust by the city in the Superintendent of the Girard Estate, it was passed, notwithstandlev, voting with the majority, and only one Republican, Smith, voting with the minority. In the Common Council his veto met with ignominious treatment. more few Democrats who nounced that they did not intend to sustain it desired a postponement of its consideration, but notwithstanding the plea for delay, the bill passed over the veto by a vote of 39 to 4. Other demonstrations of Democratic hostility to the Mayor were also made during the session. Thus, Mr. Hetzell (Dem.), in discussing the bill for the payment of the street-cleaners, said: -"If the Mayor can be believed, he will not sign the bill;" and Mr. Nickels (Dem.), in discussing the same subject, said the Mayor "has not performed his duty; he is too weak-kneed to do it, and has the claims, which I hope they will do.'

The expectation that a report would yesterbeen unable to get the report signed by a is claimed by the advocates of the Pierson farm, however, that it is more accessible, as it can be approached either by the river, by a jumpike, or by railroad, while the chief communication with the Clark farm is by railroad. It will be exceedingly unfortunate if diversity of opinion on these comparatively unimportant points causes another protracted postponement of action. The public will be more ready to excuse a slight error in the choice of a site than the continued delays which have made former municipal legislation on this subject ridiculous, inflicted a grievous burden upon taxpayers, and rendered Philadelphia the paradise of loafers and bummers.

A vigorous but unsuccessful effort was made to secure the payment of the outstanding claims of the old street contractors. An ordinance making the appropriation askel for was indefinitely postponed in Commoa Council by a vote of twenty-three to fifteen The question of fact whether these contractors rendered any substantial service whatever in some wards was raised; and they certainly should not be paid for doing nothing. Aside from the removal of offal from dwellings, the whole business of street cleaning, as practised in Philadelphia, is a humbug. The mere pretense of cleaning the streets is rarely made except when the accumulation of garbage is so great that the value of the manure collected is equal to the cost of gathering it up and carting it away. This imperfect sort of street-cleaning should be done without the expenditure of a single dollar by the city, by simply giving to farmers or dealers in manure the privilege of scraping up offal once or twice a year. At all events, when contractors notoriously neglect to discharge the duties they assume, their claims should be resisted to the bitter end, not only in Councils but in the Courts.

One of the marked features of the times is the increased interest in the new styles of street-paving. The desire for deliverance from the cobble-stones constantly grows in intensity. Experiments are being tried in various parts of the city of the different new styles, and their respective merits will soon be tested. The prevailing tendency is also illustrated by the passage yesterday of ordinances for the laying of vulcanite pavement. for the laying of the Miller improved wooden pavement on Green street, and for tramwaying several streets. A still more important proposition is under consideration in Select Council. It is an ordinance providing that every horse shall be taxed five dollars annually to raise a fund to be appropriated to the improvement of the streets of the city. No definite action has yet been taken testify for him. on this subject, and some other means for obtaining the necessary revenue may be devised, but it is evident that if this city does not speedily improve her system of street-

the verdict of both hemispheres on reading the intelligence of the death of George Peabody, which occurred last evening at London. Mr. Peabody's work is accomplished, the world has already formed its opinion of him. and we are prepared upon the first news of his decease to sum up the result of his labors, and to allude in proper terms to his character. Upon our first page will be found a *detailed account of the life of Mr. Peabody and the various services he has performed for the benefit of humanity; and it therefore but remains for us to speak of him in this place in general terms of eulogy. It is scarcely possible to allude to the career of such a man in any other than eulogistic language, and yet every one must feel that extravagant laudation is out of place, and that a plain recital of the facts are sufficient to place the great philanthropist in a proper light before the public. proceedings of Councils yesterday is the Mr. Peabody, after a long and honorable career as a merchant, during which not the shadow of a suspicion rested against his reputation, startled the world by a series of such munificent gifts for charitable purposes as had never before been heard of. In England affd America he gave away millions with the most lavish generosity, but with such wise discretion that it was impossible to accuse him of mere ostentation, or the desire to gain lawyers, and Mr. D. W. Sellers, the the praise of men. It is true that there have not been wanting those who disparaged Mr. ing his veto, by a vote of 19 to 9, Peabody's motives, but the singular modesty three Democrats, Duffy, Hookey, and Plum- of his life, and his profound sentiments of gratitude to the Almighty for all the blessings that had been bestowed upon himself, were sufficient to silence every caviller. It was impossible for Mr. Peabody to do what he did in secret, but by appropriating his great wealth to the alleviation of human suffering, to the promotion of the cause of education, and in other ways by which large numbers could receive the benefit of it, he set an example that is worthy of the imitation of men who, like him, are blest with wealth beyond their own necessities. Mr. Peabody did not wait until after his death to distribute his money, and to leave it a source of contention between his heirs and executors, with all the risks that mistakes would be made as to what his real intentions were, and that his ideas would not be carried out in spirit as well as thrown it upon Councils to refuse payment of letter. He wisely, and in the spirit of a true philanthropist, gave what he had to give while he was still in health and able to superday be made in reference to a site for a vise the management of his enormous endow-House of Correction proved fallacious. The ments. The result of this is seen in the chairman of the committee stated that he had general satisfaction that has attended the bestowal of his gifts, and before death sufficient number of the members. We un- overtook him in his green old age derstand that not with standing the favorable he was able to see already some opinion formed of the Clark farm, located of the practical results of the largenear Holmesburg, which was visited recently, hearted and clear-headed policy he adopted. a portion of the committee are inclined to Independently of his numerous private beneprefer the Pierson farm, located near Torres- factions, and the public institutions that he dale, on the Delaware river, which was has endowed, the "Homes for Laboring Men examined some months ago. Each of the in London" and the "Southern Educational farms contains about two hundred Fund" in the United States will remain as acres. There is no material differ- the monuments of his wise, clear-sighted, and ence in their price, the former being held at | practical philanthropic spirit. Mr. Peabody three hundred and fifty and the latter at three | repeatedly expressed his entire satisfaction hundred and seventy-five dollars per acre. It | with the manner in which both of these endowments were managed, and by his own words and acts effectually silenced those who complained that the money was not used in the manner he intended. In London the "Penbody Fund" has erected in different quarters of the city large and commodious buildings, in which industrious poor men are provided with clean and comfortable homes at a small rent, thus drawing them and their wives and little ones out of the dismal and filthy alleys and lanes, with their degrading associations, where they were forced to abide previously. Those who are thus aided by Mr. Peabody's bounty lose nothing of their self-respect, but they are rather encouraged to independence of thought and manly self-reliance. The families who live in these houses are removed from the atmosphere of filth and vice that formerly surrounded them: they are able to bring up their children in decency and cleanliness, and it is impossible to estimate the amount of moral and physical good that has already been accomplished in London by means of Mr. Peabody's money. The Southern Educational Fund is a proof that Mr. Peabody clearly perceived the one great need of the Southern States of the Union, and by coming to the aid of that impoverished section in the great work of building up a free school system, he at once pointed out the most effectual method of reconstruction, and he set an example to the people of the South themselves, as well as to all patriotic citizens of the United States, that has secured for him the warmest gratitude of his countrymen, and that ought to incite others to follow in his footsteps and to aid in carrying on the work he commenced.

Never perhaps since the world began have such immense sums of money been bestowed with such clear judgment, and it is in this that the chief merit of Mr. Peabody's gifts consists. It is not in the donation of millions of dollars alone to charitable purposes that men of wealth will deserve the applause of posterity, but in the manner and spirit in which the donations are made. Mr. Peabody has been in failing health for some time, and his death, although sudden, was not altogether unexpected. The announcement of his decease, however, will excite more profound feelings of regret than that of any of the princes and potentates of the earth, and he leaves a record of good deeds that will hand down his name to future ages as one of the truly great men of his time. He was a Christian philanthropist in the best sense of the word: and although he has passed away from the scene of his labors, his works remain to

THE QUARTER SESSIONS. THE Court of Quarter Sessions is not a nice place for decent people to visit, and it is not paving, she will fall far in the rear of other too much to say that its bad reputation is due great municipalities in the march of modern quite as much to some of the lawyers who practice there as to the criminals who are put en trial for every imaginable offense. There THE DEATH OF GEORGE PEABODY. | is scarcely a day passes that lawyers do not disgrace themselves and their profession by disgraceful specimens of blackguardism that are at once insults to the dignity of the Court and to the respectable people who are obliged to attend as jurymen and witnesses. The bullying of witnesses is a matter of daily occurrence, and the outrageous insults of counsel, that if perpetrated anywhere but in the court-room would subject the offender to a severe thrashing, are not only unrebuked by the Judges, but are directly encouraged by their silent acquiescence.

We had a specimen of this sort of thing a few weeks ago, at the trial of the would-be assassins of Revenue Officer Brooks, and the offending counsel in the case had an opportunity to find out what public sentiment was about such conduct. As a general rule, however, such exhibitions of blackguardism are passed over by the reporters, and, being kept out of the papers, the decent men and women of Philadelphia have no idea what a beargarden the Quarter Sessions Court-room is, unless they are unfortunate enough to be called upon the witness stand.

Yesterday there was another example of the same kind at the trial of a whisky dealer on the charge of cheating and defrauding. One of the witnesses talked too fast for the counsel for the accused, interrupted him in this elegant and eminently gentlemanly manner:-"Haviland, stop! D-n it, why don't you stop ?"

Judge Paxson, who was on the bench, had nothing to say in condemnation of this; and, as an appropriate supplement to this elegant behavior on the part of the counsel, we are informed that when the jury retired the prisoner quietly walked out of the court-room and has not been heard of since.

This is certainly a pretty state of affairs, and it seems indeed, as has frequently been claimed, that the thieves, secondrels, and rascals generally have completely the upper hand in this court. It is difficult to perceive how the criminal could have escaped in this instance without the collusion of the officers of the court, and the whole trial is anything but a favorable commentary on Judge Paxson's fitness for the position to which he has just been appointed.

A Horrid Sight.

Last Monday a colored man discovered buzzards hovering around a bridge about one and a half miles from Newtown, in Worcester county, Delaware. In hunting for the cause he found, to his horror, the horribly-mangled body of an infant, wrapped in a red "nubia," or "cloud." The birds had been feeding on it. No clue to the probable infanticide has been obtained.

A Plague.

An old mortgage for the sum of $100, given fifty years ago, on a tract of one hundred and fifty-six years ago, on a tract of one hundred and fifty-six acres of land of the Wisnerburgh patent, west of the Eric Italiroad, in Elmira, N. Y., has recently turned up to plague the present holders of the property, of whom there are probably over two hundred. The mortgage is held by the loan commissioners for the State, and the interest has been paid regularly until recently, when it ceased. Somebody will have to pay the $100, or the whole property, now worth a vast sum, will be sold under the hammer.

A Rush Promise.

The Portland Argus tells the following story of a young lady who is a pupil at one of the schools in that city, who has already, it seems, beaten her father at mathematics:— She modestly proposed that if her father would give her only one cent one day, and double the amount on each successive day for just one month. she would pledge herself never to ask of him another cent of money as long as she lived. Paterfamilias, not stopping to run over the figures in his head, and not supposing it would amount to a large sum, was glad to accept the offer at once, thinking it also a favorable opportunity to include a possible marriage dowry in the future. At the twenty-fifth day he became greatly alarmed, lest if he compiled with his own acceptance he might be obliged to be "declared bank and the compiled with the company of the company of own acceptance he might be obliged to be "declared a bankrupt on his own petition."

But at the thirtieth day the young girl demanded only the pretty sum of $5,368,709-12. The astonished merchant was only too happy to cancel the claim by advancing a handsome cash payment for his folly in allowing himself to give a bond—or his word ne considered as good as his bond—without noticing the consideration therein expressed, and by promising to return to the old custom of advancing smaller sums daily until otherwise ordered. sums daily until otherwise ordered. Our arithmetical reporter has been "figuring on to " and says that if the old gentleman had fulfilled his promise, his gushing daughter would have had, upon the receipt of the thirtieth payment, the snug little sum of $10,486,61743.
